Three chief executive officers of risk retention groups will report on how they deal with significant challenges to their organizations. Panel members head RRGs in contractors' liability, medical malpractice and homebuilders' warranty insurance. The companies are industry leaders with highly successful track records. Each CEO will explain how he arrived at a major business decision and its impact on company stakeholders. The panelists will engage in dialogue with each other and answer questions from the floor. This panel will offer RRGs, captive managers and service providers unique insights into the management decision making process.

Attendees will gain an understanding of how chief executive officers of successful RRGs make decisions on important issues facing their companies and can put this knowledge to use in career development.

After completing this course you will be able to:

- Gain an understanding of how chief executive officers of successful RRGs make decisions on import issues
- Apply lessons learned from successful executives to managing your RRG
- Identify success factors and potential pitfalls in RRG management.
